NO KISS.

"Kiss me, Witt," sang Margnerite To a pretty little tune, Holding op a dainty month, Sweet as roses born in Jane. Will was ten years old that day, And he pulled her golden curls Teasingly, and answer made:
"I'm too old-1 don't kiss girls."

Ten years paes, and Margnerite Smiles, as Witt kneels at her feet, Gazing fondly in her eyes Praying, "won't you kiss me, sweet?" Rito is seventeen to day; With her hirthday ring she toys For a moment, then replies:
"I'm too old—I don't kles hoys."

CHAPTER XVII.

Although the "oldest ichabitant" does not now recollect when the girls dressed in doe skin, as described in Ralph Ring wood's tales, yet our recollections reach back to the time when they mostly dreseed in home-spun; and it was no uncommou thing to see men and boys clad in buckskin pants and hunting shirts, with moccasins to suit; a most convenient, excellent lasting dress for dry weather, but a little worse than nothing when wet. This was the every day apparel. The most respectable and well-to do part of the community, however, were provided with "store clothes," brought with them from old Virginia, Maryland, &c., which were kept sacred for Sundays, weddings and State occasions; for be it known to onr present intelligent, refined and progressive ladies, that a fine dress was n dress for life, and frequently passed as heir-looms from generation to generation, and had not to be re-cut, re-modeled, reflowered, re-buttoned, and corded and spangled with lace, ribbons and all the Ac's that now come in flaunting colors in the ladies monthlies, and which they read and gloat over with more intense devotion than they do their Bibles.
